

Beyond Time: The Metahuman and Perception

By: Ben Gufford

I title this face jug “Metaman”. In 1993 The Merging of Humans and Machines into a Global Superorganism was written by Gregory Stock. The book supposes that a superorganism incorporates humans as its "cells" to sustain it just as our cells interwork to sustain us. This concept opens up broader ideas concerning consciousness, meta-consciousness, existence, etc.

“If you’re confused then you understand the phenomenon perfectly,” was a recent statement by one of Washington’s elect. And as expected a lack of understanding within the media drew on the need to laugh.

The human system is split almost with intentions to create a firewall that is nearly impenetrable. However, as evolution would be, we are propelled to penetrate the unknown of knowing that of the transcendent and infinite Ruliad, as Stephen Wolfram describes. Our collective intelligence or central intelligence has for some time penetrated the split system of the human mental firewall using various techniques as described in the Gateway Project research and since declassified. Beyond human limits, consciousness is described as being fundamental and permeable across space/time and multiversal. With enormous stigma, laughter, and human polarization of this knowledge, it is kept in plain sight by the researchers themselves, knowing it will be decades if not centuries before humanity’s “meta consciousness” catches up. To understand why you do what you do is to take as much possible control over what you do, such as to know that doing is explicitly tied to the will to act on the infinite “Ruliad” (Stephen Wolfram) of knowledge.

Skipping ahead, my conclusions lead to the future preceding the past to create the present. That all in time and space is only now, not before or after. And in the context of the pattern’s will, I yield to what the one rule or “Ruliad” can give; give in, give out, give up, or give way. These are the “givens”.